little effort. Another fold-down, soft-grip handle is centered at the top of the case. A full-length gasket in the lid is designed to keep dust and moisture at bay. There's also a pressure relief valve, allowing you to equalize pressures inside the case without admitting moisture.

This is a well thought out gun case with an innovative suspension system to protect firearms inside. It's certainly tougher and stronger than it looks, with the additional benefits of light weight and a highly affordable price ($124.99).

UniqueTek Premium Weapons Cleaner

UniqueTek recently sent me a bottle of its new Premium Weapons Cleaner, which is supposed to be a highly efficient, solvent-based cleaner suitable for all firearms. The product is non-toxic, and the company claims it's safe to use on plastics, composites, o-rings and all metal surfaces.

Directions for use are simple: "Clean all metal surfaces with UniqueTek Premium Weapons Cleaner using your normal cleaning methods. The cleaner deep-cleanses the metal, then evaporates completely, leaving nothing behind and preparing the surface to accept lubricants."

Because the cleaner contains no oil or other lubricants, users are advised to apply a good gun lubricant immediately after cleaning. "Lubricants will better penetrate into the metal pores, leaving a superior film of lubrication," the company says.

"I've used this cleaner on my own firearms for many years." said Lee Love, UniqueTek's product design engineer. "Now I want to make it available to shooters everywhere."

As a hunting and firearms writer, I shoot up a lot of ammunition in a lot of different guns. Because of always-pressing deadlines and simple procrastination, some of these guns don't always get the maintenance they deserve as quickly as they should. As a result, I had a few gunked-up guns on hand I'd neglected far too long. I chose a long-uncleaned 1911 pistol that had been moldering at the back of my safe, and a Remington Model 7400 auto rifle that had developed feeding problems before I put it away. Both guns were excellent candidates for the kind of thorough cleaning UniqueTek was supposed to provide.

One big advantage of UniqueTek's Premium Weapons Cleaner is that it's nontoxic and can be safely used indoors where ventilation is lacking. The company also claims the cleaner contains no ammonia and is "virtually odorless." I'll buy the ammonia part, but the product gives off a slightly astringent (but not unpleasant) aroma. Calling it "odorless" is a stretch. Because it has no oil or other additives, no residue is supposedly left behind to attract dust after the cleaner evaporates.

After field stripping the embarrassingly dirty 1911, I finally gave it the thorough part-by-part cleaning it had long deserved. Turning to the Remington 7400, I used the Premium Weapons

Cleaner on every moving part and swabbed both bore and chamber with the stuff. I didn't remove the bolt but used the pop-up dispenser cap to spray it liberally while it remained in the receiver. Because this stuff evaporates completely, I didn't worry about over-spraying. These guns may never have been so clean.

Next, I applied a thin, thin film of lubrication (omitting the Remington's gas port tube). When I took the deep-cleaned guns to the range the next day, each functioned without a single hitch.

UniqueTek's Premium Weapons Cleaner is supposed to contain no CFCs and be nonacidic, non-corrosive and nontoxic. It comes in a four-fluid-ounce unbreakable plastic bottle with a spill proof

The NEW BALD EAGLE Rimfire Cartridge Gage

"The Gage
That Works!"

$85⁰⁰

This is a gage to measure consistency of rim thickness on .22 rimfire ammunition (a .22 rimfire rifle's headspace is determined by case rim thickness). The more consistent the rim thickness, the more consistent the ignition of the primer and the powder charge in the case. In other words, the firing pin will fall the same distance every time if the same rim thickness is used on every case being fired for a particular group. By sorting the shells into various groups by rim thickness, a reduction in group size of up to 25% can be realized in some IF NOT MOST rimfire rifles. This information about group reduction comes from the .22 rimfire benchmark participants who compete in the extremely difficult BR-50 matches. All of the top shooters sort their shells into groups by checking rims and weighing the unfired cartridges.

Burris Introduces Fullfield II Camo Binoculars

Everything seems to be camouflaged these days. Following this trend, Burris now offers its Fullfield II line of hunting binoculars in Realtree Advantage Timber® HDTM camo finish.

Burris says the concept defining these binoculars is, "See, but don't be seen." One possible downside is that these camouflaged binoculars may be hard to find if you set them down for a few minutes afield then forget to pick them up until you've walked a few paces away. I've lost other gear like this and will never again own another camouflaged knife!

The new 8x42mm and 10x42mm models provide full-size performance in one of the more compact binoculars I've seen boasting 42mm objective lenses. Each model is 4.9 inches long and weighs just 23 ounces.

All lens surfaces feature broad-
